Wilma L. Vaught
Brigadier General

efforts related to the Women In Military Service For America Memorial where she was the driving force that built and now operates the $22.5 million memorial. Located at the gateway to Arlington National Cemetery, the Women's Memorial is the nation's only major memorial to pay tribute to the more than 2.5 million women who have served in the nation's defense.

Brigadier General Wilma L. Vaught, USAF, (Ret.), served in the U.S. Air Force for over 28 years, retiring in 1985 as one of the most highly decorated women in U.S. history. Throughout her career, General Vaught forged new paths and pioneered opportunities for the servicewomen who would follow. A Vietnam veteran, she was one of the few military women in that war who were not nurses. And, when she was promoted to brigadier general in 1980, she was one of a handful of women in the world who had ever achieved that distinction. While her military accomplishments are extraordinary, General Vaught's most lasting contribution will be her successful

The National Conference of Women's Bar Associations is proud to present the Leadership Workshop for Professional Women: Skills for Success.

Designed by women lawyers for all professional women, this workshop will build economic strength among professional women across professional boundaries and use that strength to improve women's lives in all areas. The workshop will provide women with the necessary tools to enhance productivity and job satisfaction. Participants will learn innovative techniques for effective communication and strategies to better market themselves, focus their efforts and advance to positions of leadership.

Over two days, attendees will participate in three workshops led by groundbreaking and internationally recognized facilitators. Participants will teach the science of negotiation and provide a practical skills-based session to put the skills learned into action. These sessions will give participants essential tools to capitalize on their own strengths, develop a unique strategic professional plan and provide high-level skills that can be immediately implemented. Attendees will commit to making an economic step forward within six months of the conclusion of the conference and have the tools to fulfill the commitment.

Who should attend?

All professional women – whether in law, accounting, finance, business, architecture, engineering, or management – will gain valuable skills from attending this outstanding professional development event.
